

Following my law school graduation I am primarily interested in pursuing a career as an international lawyer at a leading law firm, with a focus on sustainable corporate governance and Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) regulations. My goal is to apply my legal education and global viewpoint toward navigating the complex legal universe in which multinational corporations operate, as they continuously strive to comply with developing governance standards and to adopt sustainable practices. I am particularly passionate about the task of integrating ESG principles into corporate strategies, which I regard as increasingly crucial in today's business environment, where sustainability, ethical conduct, and social responsibility are being recognized as key factors in a corporation's overall success. My goal is helping organizations steer a course through the thicket of international regulations and standards – not only to ensure compliance, but to carry forward their corporate citizenship and sustainability initiatives. This involves making a tangible difference in the way that companies perform on the global stage focusing on ensuring that they consider ethical, environmental, and social needs alongside traditional business drivers.
